REPUBLICAN CLUBS.

Call for the Annual Convention of the State League.

The fourth annual convention of the Republican League of the State of West Virginia will convene in the city of Parkersburg, Wood county, at 12 o'clock noon, MONDAY, FEBRUARY 22, 1892, (this day having been recommended by the National League), for the election of officers for the ensuing year, the selection of delegates to the fifth annual convention of the Republican League of the United States, and for the transaction of such other business as may regularly come before it.
Each Republican club in the state is entitled to be represented by five delegates.
It is requested that the election of delegates be held and a list thereof be forwarded to the Secretary of the State League at Parkersburg, W. Va., as soon as possible.
Full information as to the rules of transportation will be published as soon as the necessary arrangements can be made.
HENRY C. FLEISHER, President.
R. ALEXANDER, Secretary.

Cleveland Tackles Hill.
At the Andrew Jackson justification of Democratic business men in New York last night Mr. Cleveland went for Senator Hill roughshod. He did not once name Hill, but from beginning to end of his speech he had Hill in mind.
Hill's promulgation of a policy for the Democratic party has for its chief feature the repeal of the McKinley tariff law and the re-enactment of the tariff act of 1883. This was the act denounced by the Democratic party on the hustling, in the press, in its national platform. This was the act which the Mills bill was to repeal and supersede.
Hill's advice then amounts to this, that his party shall do what it can to replace the statute book a measure which it has denounced as roundly as it ever denounced the McKinley act. With this declaration of tariff principles he would go before the country in the pending national campaign.

Mr. Cleveland admonishes his party that this was not the Jacksonian way of doing things. The reference to Jackson has nothing to do with the fact that Andrew Jackson was a protectionist. Mr. Cleveland refers to Jackson's habit of fighting a fight out to the end once he had begun it. The illustration is pertinent and will doubtless be appreciated.
Mr. Cleveland makes no effort to conceal his contempt of a policy that would at this time turn back what he is pleased to call the movement for tariff reform, and it is easy to see that he has no less contempt for the man who advises his party to this cowardly course.
Mr. Cleveland has something to say about "finesse" which is not hard to understand in the light of Mr. Hill's thimble-ragging politics. The speech marks a man of conviction and courage and is a distinct challenge to David B. Hill.

More Good English Testimony.
Col. Howard Vincent, member of Parliament for the Sheffield district, recently visited the United States, Canada and certain Asiatic countries in the interests of his constituents, "who are very adversely affected by the McKinley tariff and the increasingly prohibitory customs duties of other nations."
Col. Vincent hopes it may be possible to make better terms with Canada for the admission of English goods than are now accorded and better than Canada accords to the United States. If an advantage of but five per cent over this country can be gained it will be of immense advantage to British manufacturers. From an interview with Col. Vincent in the London Financial News the following significant extract is taken:
"Can you give me any information about the working of the McKinley tariff?"
"I can tell you this: I believe it to be a tremendous success for America, and to be doing a great deal to give American wares to American working men."
"Then you do not believe it is going to be repealed?"
"Not for a minute. The Democrats are completely changing their tone, and openly declaring that they are no longer advocates of free trade."
"What is the special merit that you observe in the operation of the McKinley tariff?"
"I will put aside the injurious effect it has wrought upon our iron and steel industry, the decline in British exports to America, the decline in textile wares, and the decline in the tin plate industry in South Wales, and confine myself to the advantages reciprocity treaties entailed under the operation of the McKinley tariff act with Brazil and other countries, and even now with our own West Indian colonies. It is upon these reciprocity treaties that the government of the republic will appear next year, I believe, to the support of the country, and as showing the difference between the American compared with commercial negotiations under protection and the importance of the English government and people, even to protest against the tariff levied by foreign nations."

Our English friends are getting their eyes open and are beginning to see the point. They realize that the McKinley tariff, instead of ruining this country as the Democrats and certain English prophets said it would, is "a tremendous success for America" and that we Americans are too smart to throw overboard so good a thing. They are unable longer to put faith in Democratic promises to repeal the protective tariff when they see Democrats such as Senator Hill backing down on that subject and the Democratic house of representatives refusing to make speaker or even chairman of its ways and means committee the man who gave his name to the latest Democratic tariff measure.

The keen observer above quoted perceives that protection and reciprocity complete the circle and make a commercial combination which the Democratic party will assail in vain. He notes that the McKinley tariff is "doing a great deal to give American wares to American workingmen," and he is aware that Americans will regard a law that does this as too good to be abandoned for no better reason than to give the work and the wages to the labor of foreign countries.

Another Old Citizen Gone.
The death of Mr. Michael Reilly takes away another of the men who have been long identified with the business life of Wheeling. He had lived well beyond man's allotted time and achieved wonderful success.

Wedded as he was to business he found time for a wide range of reading and his taste led him to the best. Until recent years he took an active part in politics, having served his party as chairman of its state committee. He was a thorough-going Democrat.

Mr. Reilly will be missed in the business community, of which until within a few days past he was actively identified as at any time in his long career, and his loss will be felt by those friends whom long association had drawn to him.

A Remarkable Series of Foreign Letters.

Mr. Wakeman's letters, published every Saturday in the INTELLIGENCER, have never been more attractive than now when he is taking his readers with him through picturesque Portugal. His description of the people, an art in which he excels, has not been equalled by any traveler so far as we are aware.

Mr. Wakeman has the rare gift of being able to make his reader see what he is writing about. He will write once a week for the INTELLIGENCER through 1892 as he did in 1891, and we can safely promise that his letters will be as interesting in the future as they have been in the past.

Almost any other American than Mr. Blaine may eat what he pleases and as much as he pleases without being taken to task. Mr. Blaine is regarded as public property and as having no private right to derange his interior department. Could a handsomer compliment be paid?

Young Anas, of Egypt, is almost too young to appreciate the fix his father's death puts him in. His youth is already suggested as a good pretext for more foreign interference with Egyptian affairs, as though Egypt were in need of more of that kind of treatment.

The advance of civilization in the Indian Territory is marked by a frightful mine explosion accompanied by wholesale loss of life. The casualty stands well to the front among events of its kind.

AFTER Senator Hill shall have read Mr. Cleveland's speech this morning the breakfast table will lose its charm for him. That speech is a rasping utterance considered from the Hill point of view.

Our Ohio friends have settled down admirably since the recent senatorial contest. But they are not going to sleep. They will be wide-awake enough before the harvest is ripe.

Solving the Mystery.

New York, Jan. 8.—Superintendent Humstone, of the Western Union Telegraph Company, is still investigating Tuesday's pool room swindle by which western pool rooms were victimized out of many thousands of dollars. He said this morning that he had not yet succeeded in locating the blame, and he denied that operators Frank Boyle, of New York, and John Graham of Chicago, had been suspended pending the inquiry. Within a few days Mr. Humstone expects to solve the mystery.

The Lone Highwayman.

STOCKTON, CALA., Jan. 8.—A passenger on the stage from San Andreas reports that the stage running between Mokelumne Hill and Valley Springs was stopped by a lone highwayman yesterday. The driver said the robber had a shot gun and made him through the express box, and also empty his pockets.

Boiler Explosion.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., Jan. 8.—The boiler of a large saw mill at Bolling, Ala., the property of Caldwell, Miller & Flour, of this city, exploded yesterday, instantly killing Engineer Cooper and four other employees of the company. The mill is a total loss. Loss $30,000; no insurance.

Billy McGlory Sentenced.

New York, Jan. 8.—Recorder Smythe this morning sentenced "Billy" McGlory, the notorious dive keeper, to one year in the penitentiary and to pay a fine of $300 for keeping a disorderly house.

Fatal Collision.

Mild-Winter Excursion to Washington via B. & O. R. R.

On Thursday, January 14, the B. & O. R. R. will begin their annual series of mid-winter excursions to Washington from Parkersburg, Wheeling, Pittsburgh and all intermediate stations to Washington Junction, Md. For this, as for similar excursions during preceding winters, the B. & O. will offer an exceedingly low rate, an unexcelled train service, and every accommodation necessary for the comfort and convenience of passengers—all of which should render the trip a very desirable one. With each succeeding season these excursions to the national capital are growing in popular favor.

Washington is full of attractions. It always is. Congress is in session. The public buildings, the White House, the museums and the art galleries are always open to visitors free of charge. Then, too, there are to be seen the elegant private residences, the broad avenues, the spacious parks and the numberless monuments.

Tickets will be valid for return passage ten days after day of sale, allowing ample time for visiting Mt. Vernon, Old Point Comfort, Richmond, and other adjacent points.

Tickets from Pittsburgh, Wheeling and intermediate points to Martinsburg, are valid to Baltimore.

Trains leave Wheeling at 6:10 a. m. and 6:10 p. m., and for the two trains only will tickets be sold. Pullman parlor cars without change on morning train and Pullman sleeping cars on evening train.

Round trip rate $10. Correspondingly low rates from other stations.

ALL FOR HILL.

Pennsylvania Democrats Decide to Support the New York Dictator.
WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 8.—A distinguished party of Democrats arrived here from Philadelphia last evening. In the party were ex-Senator William A. Wallace, Congressman Mulchier, Eckley B. Scott, J. B. Guiley, State Chairman Kerr and other prominent party leaders. Each represented a distinct and personal following and extensive financial resources.

The Pennsylvanians were joined here by party leaders from New York, Ohio, Indiana and other Western and Southern states. All united in a long and private conference at Willard's Hotel. Before they broke up they were pledged to aid in making Hill the party's candidate.

It was learned that J. M. Kerr would yield to an appeal and accept a re-election as chairman of the state committee; that J. M. Guiley should be named as Pennsylvania's member of the national committee and that Pennsylvania's delegation will be arranged to vote for Hill for President. If, however, the state committee is allowed to fill the vacancy Secretary of State Hartry may be selected, in which event Mr. Guiley will go to the convention in another capacity and will succeed Hartry just when the committee will have some real political work to do.

It was the expressed sentiment of the gathering that Senator Hill's mastery of the bringing of New York so irredeemably into the Democratic column has made him the political lion of the hour and that he gives positive assurances that no other candidate can give, that he can carry his own state against all comers.
